Vesak Lanterns Preparations !

Thank You for Lighting Up Vesak Together !!

A heartfelt thank you to everyone who took part in our Vesak lantern preparations. Your creativity, care, and collective spirit brought light and meaning to our celebrations. It was more than decoration—it was a moment of togetherness that honored the essence of Vesak

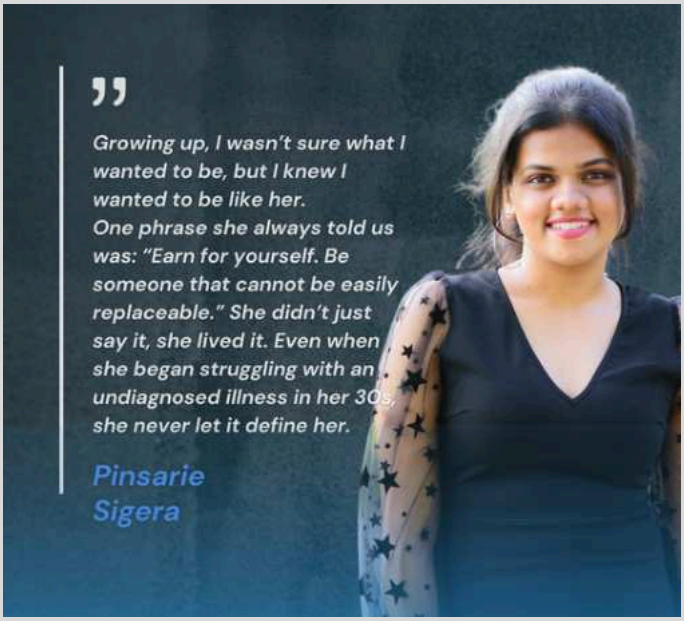

Mother's Day Celebrations !

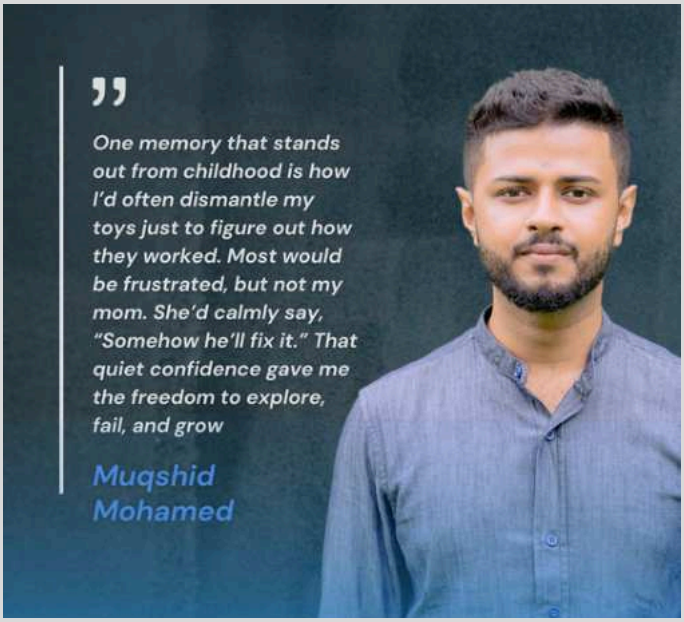

If there's one thing I thank her for the most, it's her sacrifice. She set aside her own interests and dreams to give us every opportunity. Watching her do that taught me what true dedication and resilience really mean.
Manas Najmuddeen

My mom, she always did things with care, without expecting anything in return. That quiet integrity is something I try to reflect in my work, especially in my contributions to open-source projects.

Growing up, I wasn't sure what I wanted to be, but I knew I wanted to be like her.
One phrase she always told us was: "Earn for yourself. Be someone that cannot be easily replaceable." She didn't just say it, she lived it. Even when she began struggling with an undiagnosed illness in her 30s, she never let it define her.
Pinsarie Sigera

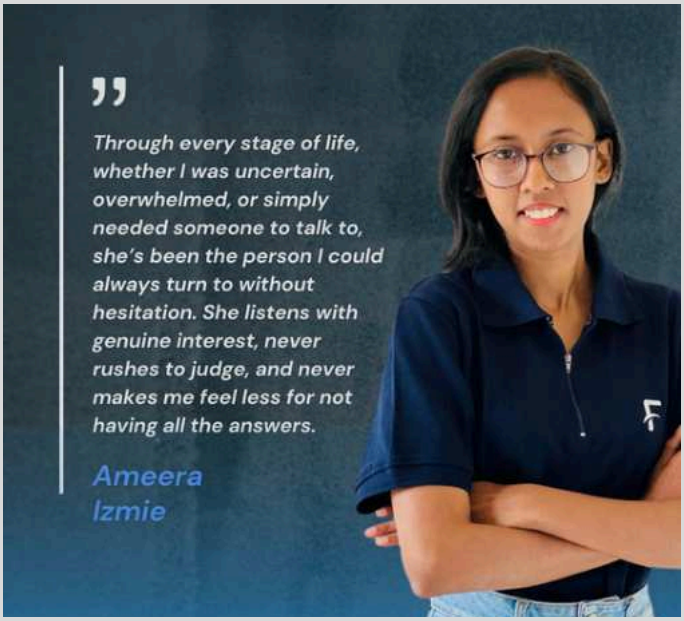

She's been more than a parent; she's been my first teacher, lifelong mentor, and biggest supporter. From an early age, she instilled in me the importance of education and self-reliance. But it wasn't just her words that left a mark, it was her actions.
Munsira Mansoor

She was never the one for hugs or big emotional displays, but her love showed in every action. As a school teacher, she cared for every child without discrimination. At home, she did the same; balancing patience, support, and guidance with dedication.
Adithya Narasinghe

One memory that stands out from childhood is how I'd often dismantle my toys just to figure out how they worked. Most would be frustrated, but not my mom. She'd calmly say, "Somehow he'll fix it." That quiet confidence gave me the freedom to explore, fail, and grow

#supermom

As you may remember, this year we invited our team members to write a letter of appreciation for their mothers and share it on LinkedIn as part of our #Supermom campaign.

What surprised and touched us most was the immediate response, several of you reached out the moment the idea was shared. It was unexpected, but incredibly meaningful. To ensure a range of voices and experiences, we also reached out to a few more team members to encourage participation. Some said “yes, why not,” some admitted they were a bit shy, and others said, “maybe next time—I’m not really a social media person.” And all of those responses made perfect sense. Many of us were raised in cultures, especially in South Asia, where open, verbal expressions of appreciation aren’t always the norm. Instead, love is often shown through quiet, meaningful gestures. That’s something we deeply respect and understand.

But here’s the takeaway: one way or another, it’s important that we do show appreciation, to those who truly deserve it, while we still have the chance. Thank You to Everyone Who Shared Their Story !

We’ll leave you with a thoughtful quote from one of our participants:

“Writing the LinkedIn post made me realise how much we take relationships for granted—and how intentionally I need to start appreciating them.”

and here’s to the people who raise us !

The Growth Corner

“Growth doesn’t happen by chance — it comes from curiosity, consistency, and the courage to evolve. And here are some tips to help you along the way.”

Agile Workspace

Embracing Change: Why Agile Values Flexibility Over Fixed Plans

In the traditional world of software development, strict project plans dictate what should be built and when. However, Agile challenges this rigidity by valuing responding to change over following a plan. While planning is essential, adaptability is what ensures long-term success in a fast-evolving industry.

Why Adaptability Matters?

The business landscape is constantly changing—new technologies emerge, customer expectations shift, and competitors innovate. Teams that rigidly follow outdated plans risk delivering solutions that are obsolete before they even launch. Agile teams, on the other hand, embrace change and adjust their roadmap as needed to stay relevant.

Real-World Example

Consider a social media company building a new messaging feature. Halfway through development, a major competitor introduces AI-powered chat suggestions, shifting user expectations. Instead of blindly following their original road map, an Agile team swiftly re-prioritises their backlog, integrating AI-driven features to maintain competitiveness.

Conclusion

Responding to change is not just an Agile principle—it's a competitive advantage. Companies that stay flexible and embrace evolving needs will build products that remain valuable and impactful in an ever-changing digital world.

The Wellness Corner

“Well-being is not a destination, but a journey nurtured by mindful choices, self-compassion, and the courage to prioritize yourself. Here are some simple practices to support your wellness and help you thrive along the way.”

7 June : World Food Safety Day.

Protecting Health, Empowering Change

World Food Safety Day is observed each year on 7 June, bringing attention to a crucial issue that affects everyone, the safety of our food and water. Contaminated food can lead to serious health issues, impact productivity, and in severe cases, cause long-term harm.
This global observance reminds us of the collective responsibility we hold, from production to consumption, in keeping food safe.

Food safety is not just a public health concern; it also plays a critical role in achieving the UN's Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) by supporting better health, reducing poverty, and promoting responsible consumption.

At Fcode Labs, while we may not be directly in the food industry, awareness and education still matter. Whether it's in the meals we order, the snacks we share at work, or the care we take preparing food at home, staying informed helps build healthier communities — both in and outside our workplace.

Let's use this day to be more conscious of how we handle food, and remember — safe food today means a healthy tomorrow.

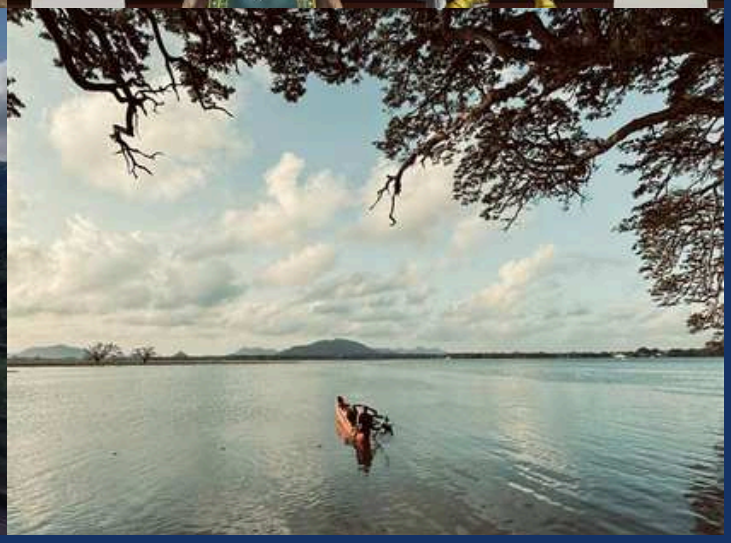

The Creative Corner

“Every creation tells a story — and here, we celebrate the unique voices, talents, and imagination of our own team.”

City of Echoes

Every evening, after the last code commit and the inbox is cleared, Naren walks to the lake's edge, headphones in place, and his cat Pixel trailing behind. The skyline across the water blinks with the rhythm of a city that never truly sleeps, its lights dancing on the surface like forgotten thoughts. Naren moved here two years ago, chasing opportunity, but also escaping noise, the kind that doesn't come from traffic. In the quiet of this spot, the city becomes a soft blur. He's not alone, not exactly. Pixel's purrs, the faint beats from his playlist, and the glowing windows across the water remind him that everyone, in their own way, is just trying to make sense of things. He doesn't know what tomorrow holds. But for now, this moment —soft rain in the air, the cat beside him, and lights painting the lake, is enough.
